Rooibos tea originates from the Cederberg region of South Africa and has been used for centuries by the indigenous Khoisan people for its medicinal and calming properties. The rooibos plant (Aspalathus linearis) is native only to this region and thrives in its unique climate and sandy soil.
Rooibos gained wider recognition during World War II, when Asian tea imports were disrupted, prompting South Africans and others to turn to local alternatives. Its popularity spread globally in the late 20th and early 21st centuries, especially among health-conscious consumers due to its caffeine-free nature and high antioxidant content.

Originating in ancient Egypt and Africa, hibiscus tea—also known as karkadé—was prized by royalty and used in ceremonies. Over centuries, it spread globally, becoming agua de Jamaica in Latin America and a traditional drink in the Middle East and Caribbean. Today, it's enjoyed worldwide as a vibrant, healthful beverage.

Chamomile tea is a gentle, golden herbal infusion made from dried chamomile flowers. Naturally caffeine-free, it offers a soft, apple-like flavor with delicate floral notes. Widely known for its calming effects, it's often used to promote relaxation, reduce stress, and support restful sleep.
Chamomile has been used since ancient times, cherished by the Egyptians, Greeks, and Romans for its healing properties. In European folk medicine, it became a go-to remedy for anxiety, digestive issues, and insomnia. Today, chamomile tea remains a timeless choice for comfort and wellness across cultures.

Minty • Sweet • Aromatic

Moroccan tea is a syrupy, fragrant joy in a glass! Fresh, fragrant mint is blended with green tea to create this iconic beverage.
Moroccan tea, also known as atai, is a fragrant blend of green tea leaves—typically Chinese gunpowder—steeped with generous handfuls of fresh spearmint and sweetened with sugar.
Traditionally poured from a height to create a light foam, it's served in small glasses as a symbol of hospitality, warmth, and connection.
Its refreshing taste and soothing aroma make it both invigorating and comforting, a timeless staple of Moroccan life. It is in Moroccan culture, a symbol of hospitality, often served with warmth and ceremony to welcome guests and mark moments of connection.
